A Report on Science and the Spiritual Quest

—by G. Stanford Bratton, Co-Executive Director, Network of Religious Communities

It was a remarkable event. Top scientists from around the world gathered at the Harvard Memorial Church in October for a three-day conference on Science and the Spiritual Quest. They came from many fields: mathematics, astronomy, physics, astrophysics, biology, neurology, and computer sciences and different religious traditions: Christian, Judaism, Islam, Hinduism, Buddhism, and Naturalism. They joined in two kinds of dialogue: (1) a sharing of their lives as scientists as they attempt to personally integrate their work with their spiritual life; and (2) a sharing of their different religious traditions.

It was my good fortune to have had the opportunity to participate in this remarkable conference. I would like to briefly share with you some of my impressions.

First, while none attempted to use science as proof for God, they did see a convergence of the two domains. The scientists were troubled by the attempt to relegate science to matters of how and the spiritual to matters of why. Each needs to be open to the other; science needs to be open to intuition and discernment as ways of knowing, and religion needs to be more open to the findings and insights of the sciences. Some called for a complete redefinition of science that is more inclusive of the spiritual while others warned of the increasing irrelevance of a religion which sees itself as the provider of answers to the unknown.

Second, there was, among the scientists present, a general sense of awe and wonder about the complexity, intricate design, and interdependence of the universe. Dr. Ramanath Cowsik presented a “Reflection on Einstein’s Spirituality” which he said included cosmic wonder and devout humility, and led to ethical behavior. Dr. Jane Goodall reported that chimps have a sense of wonder which, if they had a spoken language, might lead to a kind of religion. Dr. Trinh Xuan Thuan, an astronomer from the University

RWIC Schedules Winter "Kick-Off"

Region-Wide Interreligious Conversation, sponsored by the Network of Religious Communities, will begin a winter session beginning with a "Kick-Off" at 7:00 p.m. on Monday, January 28, at St. Lawrence RC Church, 1520 East Delavan Avenue (near Eggert Road), Buffalo.

The "Conversation" brings together congregations of diverse religious and racial backgrounds to promote understanding and open dialogue about the past, present and future of the region in which we live. Our purpose is to develop an inclusive vision that crosses social, geographic, religious, racial and ethnic boundaries. This is accomplished by engaging congregations and religious organizations in small group structured discussion, and collaborating with existing efforts to foster understanding among urban, suburban and rural residents.

Each "Conversation" group consists of 8-12 people from two congregations. Urban congregations are paired with suburban or rural congregations. People of different religious traditions and races are paired when possible. Participants attend a "Kick-Off" followed by five 1-1/2 hour sessions and a "Celebration" event. A trained facilitator helps the group stay focused on the curriculum.

To join the "Conversation," please:

1. Contact the Reverend "Butch" Mazur at 716-882-4793 ext. 223 to express your interest;
2. Identify a Congregational Coordinator who will be your key contact person;
3. Enlist 4-6 participants; and
4. Plan to attend the "Kick-Off" on January 28, engage in the five-session dialogue and join in the Celebration that follows the completion of the Winter "Conversation."

of Virginia, focused upon the non-separability of particles in quantum mechanics as an expression of the interdependence of all phenomena in the universe; that is, each individual part depends upon all the other parts. Similarly, several physicists pointed out that we are stardust and several biologists that we are deeply related in our common ancestry. Dr. Ursula Goodenough, a biologist, urged us to see ourselves as a part of creation.

Third, the centerpiece of the second day was telecast and focused on the question, "What does it mean to be human?" There were several consistent themes, the biofriendliness of the cosmos, the concept of emergence and the possibility of human freedom. Dr. Paul Davies, author of God and the New Physics, pointed out that life and mind are fundamental to the universe and asked, "Why is this?" Biological Anthropologist Dr. Terrence Deacon asked, "Do we move ourselves or are we moved by an unseen hand?" Against the commonly held notion of a "first cause," Deacon described an emergent world in which complexity, order and purpose emerge from within. In response, Biologist Rev. Canon Dr.

Arthur Peacock remarked, "God makes things make themselves." In this context, Neurologist Dr. William Newsome wrestled with the concept of human freedom, concluding that entities, including humans, capable of reacting with their environment and learning from the interaction, are constrained but not determined by their biology. Appropriately, Dr. Jane Goodall remarked, "Humans have the ability to crash planes into buildings or self sacrifice for others, both in the name of religion."

On September 11th the world witnessed acts of high-tech terrorism in which religion and science met in a marriage of death and destruction. Taking a lesson from those horrific events, the conference concluded with a call for a new alliance between science and the spiritual in the interest of peace. Perhaps this was best expressed by Dr. Bruno Guiderdoni, a leading astrophysicist and the Director of the Islamic Institute for Advanced Studies in Paris, when he said, "Scientists can help us to see the unity that underlies all Truth. By their very nature, both science and belief in God must be forces for wholeness and not for fragmentation."

Network Pantry Approaching Crisis Situation—Please Help!!

This holiday season, please remember those among us who will not have enough food to feed their families. The Network of Religious Communities Emergency Food Pantry has experienced an increase of more than 50 percent in the number of families requesting assistance over the past few months. Many families, finding themselves in situations beyond their control, have been forced to seek help for the first time.

Due to the increased demand for food, the Pantry needs help from congregations and individuals. The supply of food is not keeping up with the demand. The increase in demand has also placed a heavier work load on volunteers who currently serve. There are several ways you can help.

First, please consider organizing a food drive in your congregation during the holiday season to provide an opportunity for people to help those in our community who live in poverty. Some congregations also plan regular food drives throughout the year. Donations of food may be delivered to the Network of Religious Communities any weekday. Call 716-882-4793 to make arrangements.

Second, if you can spare four hours (or more) per month, please consider volunteering. The Pantry is located at the Network of Religious Communities, 1272 Delaware Avenue, Buffalo, and is open weekday mornings. Volunteers are needed each day from 9:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m. Some people volunteer once a month; others commit to one morning each week. The schedule is arranged to accommodate the volunteer's availability. Responsibilities include greeting people and recording required information, packing bags of food, and stocking/organizing shelves. Training is provided and new volunteers are teamed with experienced people. Every year, the Network honors volunteers at a special luncheon. Anyone interested in volunteering at the Pantry should call 716-882-4793.

Third, monetary donations provide the means for purchasing food as needed to provide a nutritious diet for families. Please send your gift to the Network of Religious Communities, 1272 Delaware Avenue, Buffalo, NY 14209-2496. Include a brief note indicating that you want your donation to be designated for the Food Pantry.

Any help you can provide, either by collecting food, volunteering, or making a monetary contribution, is greatly needed and will be deeply appreciated. Without additional help now, the Pantry may be forced to turn people away.

Thank You Volunteers!

Network of Religious Communities Has Boiler Replaced

During our annual boiler inspection it was discovered that the base of our boiler had significantly deteriorated and that immediate action was required. Our choices were to replace the base of the existing boiler at a cost of nearly $5,000.00 or install a new boiler.

The Trustees of the Network authorized an engineering study to determine the best course of action. The engineer recommended a redesign of the existing system and replacing the existing boiler with several modular boilers. The engineer was then authorized to design a new system which included the new boilers.

Thanks to a generous grant from the Margaret L. Wendt Foundation, we have been able to move forward with the installation of a new heating system including three new modular boilers. While the grant did not cover the entire cost of the installation, it has enabled us to have a more efficient heating system which should last about thirty years. This is truly good news.
